Catalog Description

This course establishes advanced performance tools, leadership and in-depth understanding of cultural and historical perceptions.

Prerequisite: Permission of instructor/audition Offered: Fall

Objectives

- Each student will gain increased knowledge in the study of varied choral music and literature.
- Each student will develop leadership skills through participation in sectional and full rehearsals.

This course builds on concepts to develop advanced understandings of cultural, historical, and aesthetic perceptions and directing skills through in-depth study and performances.

This course requires proper research skills or section/ensemble rehearsal techniques.

Outcomes

Music ensembles are laboratory courses in aesthetics. Everybody is part of the lab team. The success or failure of any participant in a music ensemble affects all others. Therefore a cooperative effort on the part of all is an absolute prerequisite to a satisfactory musical outcome. In other words:

No matter how well you sing individually, you still need to ensure that others can achieve at a high level. You are not only responsible for yourself but for every single other singer in the choir.

You are especially responsible for one or two others. How’s that for carrying a heavy burden? Seem unrealistic? Think about any work environment. As a part of a company or team, you can do your part well and still have a final outcome that is less than it should be. The grading policy for this class is designed to make you responsible for not only yourself, but to your fellow singers. It encourages responsibility to the whole class while recognizing the fact that you are ultimately responsible for your own achievement.

5. Do not wear inappropriate clothing. Review our class dress code guidelines to ensure that you are not out of dress code. Students who are out of dress code will be removed from class sessions and required to change their attire before returning to the virtual class.

6. Due to CDC recommendations and guidelines, this class does not allow students to share the same physical space with any other student or class related personnel, other than family members, during any virtual class event. All virtual class events are to be completed independently and will not require or expect any students to be in the physical presence of another student.

7. Non-class guests are not allowed at any virtual class functions except the Final Virtual Concert.

9. Your login name for all class events must be YOUR legal first and last name only.

19. All students must review, understand, and sign all class documents and disclaimers prior to the start of the virtual class. Questions may be directed to jhan@lamar.edu.

20. Any action not specifically stated in this list but judged to be “out of line” will be reported to the instructor and appropriate action taken. Consequences will begin with, and are not limited to, immediate removal from the event or class.

Virtual Class Dress Code
A change of attire would be required if the student was showing any private areas of the body, was wearing see-through clothing, or if the attire was distracting to the student’s or other students’ online learning environment. No piece of clothing should be falling off...ie. Spaghetti straps...etc...., should not show large portions of the chest region, and bottoms like shorts and skirts should not show anything above the mid-thigh. We expect students to follow the above basic guidelines. These dress code guidelines are in effect for all virtual events. Being deemed out of dress code will result in immediate removal from the class or event and an appropriate change of attire will be required before reentry to any class event.

Video/Camera Surroundings and Backgrounds Policy

Students and Faculty must keep the areas of view within their video camera clear of personal or inappropriate items during all virtual class-related events. Backgrounds and surroundings within camera view should show the most minimal amount of one’s personal living space and a plain background is most advised. We also advise that participants set up their camera in a way that show no more than the waist up, whether sitting or standing. However, as long as participants are following all dress code and video/camera surroundings and backgrounds policies, there will be no violation.

Items that should not be in view include, and are not limited to, photos (ex. personal family photos, other personal photos), a sleeping area, any type of item that could be used to personally identify an individual, their home dwelling, or people within the individual’s personal relations, additional clothing items that may be hanging or scattered...etc...

If using a virtual background during camp events, the virtual background must be class appropriate according to the above stated policies. A virtual background should not show any content that would violate any class rule, expectation, or guideline.

Any student with a real or virtual background or surrounding that is deemed to be in violation by any class personnel, will be removed from the class event and a change of background or surrounding will be required before reentry to the class.

The following of these guidelines are mandatory for all class participants and will help us in our effort to ensure the safety and privacy for all participants in our online setting.

Copyright and Royalty Protection

All students are required to purchase the textbook in order to participate in the class.

We will record our own accompaniment files rather than use other accompaniment tracks. This will ensure that the camp is free from copyright violations or royalty issues. These accompaniment recordings will be used in our live Zoom sessions as well as in our virtual choir concert. We will receive recording right permission from publishers to create our own recordings.

All camp participants will be required to sign the copyright disclaimer and agreement below:

Lamar University Virtual Class Guidelines and Contract Agreement
Purchase of the textbook is required for participation in the virtual class. The copying, downloading, or sharing of the music is not permitted by law or by the university, the copying, downloading, or sharing of accompaniment or voice practice tracks is not permitted by law or by the university, and it is not permitted by law or by the university to copy, download, or share any virtual class resource, such as, and not limited to, recorded sectionals or masterclasses...etc...with any other person. Only Lamar University Virtual class participants may access any class resource and the copying, downloading, or sharing of any of these resources is not permitted by law or by the university.

Lamar University and the Lamar University Virtual Class are not responsible for the violation of any copyright law or royalty violation and any violator will be held accountable directly by law and independently from the university and class.

COVID-19 Requirements

The Lamar community is beginning this semester during a health crisis, which is unprecedented for a university and which has erupted on a massive scale. President Evans has outlined and required the following personal mitigation steps.

- Adhering to social distancing protocols (6 feet)
- Following enhanced personal hygiene practices, including regular handwashing and/or use of hand sanitizing products when soap and water are not readily available
- Self-screening for any signs or symptoms of COVID-19 before coming to campus (or leaving dorm room if a campus resident) and seeking medical care if feeling ill
- Wearing masks or other face coverings inside all buildings at all times except when alone in an office or dorm room

Students taking this class are required to wear masks or face coverings in the classroom at all times. Faculty and students share the same goals during this health crisis; we want success in this course, and we want the campus to remain open. Members of the Lamar community share significant and unrelenting responsibilities. As members of the larger world community, we have not only the opportunity but the duty to develop and to exhibit a sense of social responsibility. Masks protect those people around you, and everyone has to wear a mask for this measure to benefit all of us. During this Coronavirus pandemic, wearing a mask is a sign of mutual respect. The journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences suggests that “among all strategies for reducing transmission, wearing face masks may be the central variable that determines the spread of the virus.”

We are responsible for each other. Each of us has to protect the Lamar family and to remember that we have especially vulnerable populations among us; for example, some students have chronic illnesses or disabilities, some students have children, some students are older, and some faculty are older. Our individual choices are of the utmost importance. The university has confidence that all students will recognize their part in maintaining a safe environment for the campus community and that students will make the best choices while on and off-campus. In large part, your behavior will determine if the campus remains open for the entire semester. Also, an outbreak on the campus would affect not only our campus but the regional communities. Universities have an ethical responsibility to lead and to model good behavior. You, the students, are the heart of the university. Everyone has to participate because an outbreak becomes everyone’s problem.

Students who exhibit any of the symptoms of COVID-19 have a civic responsibility not to expose others to the virus. If a student has symptoms like a fever or a cough, the student should seek medical help and not attend class. As President Evans has stated, “In the spirit of caring for one another and ensuring the health of each other, it is important that we accept a role of responsibility.”

Any student who has a medical condition or a disability that would prohibit the student from wearing a mask should provide documentation to the Lamar Disabilities Resource Center.
